Shepherd News

Scriptural Reflections

This is one of the famous oracles featuring the ideal Servant of God. This figure is a welcome contrast to others who resisted Isaiah's message. Most notorious of these others are Kings Ahaz and Hezekiah. Both monarchs relied on earthly resources for security, dismissing the prophet's invitation to seek security in the God of Israel.

The oracle begins with the Servant confessing total openness to the word of God. This is precisely where others failed. Unlike the ideal Servant, others did rebel against God's effort to steer them in the right direction. They turned their backs on God, placing their own agendas over God's plan for them. King Ahaz refused to trust in God's word conveyed to him by the prophet. Hezekiah promised to seek security in God alone, but soon afterwards he made an alliance with a foreign power. By contrast, the Servant in this reading remained loyal even though that loyalty brought personal suffering. Such hardship included beatings, disgrace, and disfigurement.

The Servant's source of strength is reliance on God. Displays of disrespect by others cannot shake the Servant's resolve to do God's will. The Servant finds honor and respect in serving God. The privilege of serving God cannot be removed by earthly attempts to disparage this vindication. The Servant does not shrink from confrontation. God puts the Servant in the right. No earthly court can remove it. If only the kings of Isaiah's day had such confidence in God, they would not have yielded to the influences of their misguided courtiers.

This passage describes the first of three times in Mk where Jesus will predict his suffering, death, and resurrection (8:27-35; 9:30-37; 10:32-45). Each occasion consists of three movements. First, Jesus will predict his suffering, death, and resurrection. Second, the disciples will misunderstand the meaning of Jesus' prediction. Third, Jesus will offer a corrective teaching meant both for the disciples and the readers or hearers. It is precisely in the corrective teaching that Jesus will express the theology of the cross as the way of discipleship.

The stage is set for the first passion prediction through a conversation Jesus is having with his disciples regarding who people say that Jesus is. After a few responses, Jesus point-blank asks the disciples who they think he is. Without hesitation, Peter gives the right answer, "You are the Christ." This allows Jesus to give his understanding of what it means to be the Christ (Messiah) by predicting his suffering, death, and resurrection. Peter does not comprehend what Jesus is saying. He responds to it violently and ends up being cursed as Satan.
